HANDPICKED HOTELS

Four- and Five-Star Accommodations

When you're not jetting to your next location by private plane you'll enjoy four- and five-star accommodations at incredible locations around the world. On these extraordinary adventures, expect nothing short of the best as you experience quality accommodations chosen for their amenities and prime locations. Unwind from your day of travel at top-rated hotels and resorts while preparing yourself for the exciting days of learning ahead.

A Typical Day On the Road & In the Air

To make the most of every day, your experiences start early in the morning and keep you exploring until late afternoon. There will be lots of walking, occasionally up to five miles a day and standing up to two hours, so good shoes are key! Expect varied terrain — you may benefit from a walking stick.

On most days when traveling by private plane, you will depart from one time zone and arrive into another. When traveling through the airport, your luggage will be handled by staff, but you will still need to pass through security. While flying, take advantage of your reclining seat to rest, enjoy a refreshment or socialize with other participants.

Once you land, you might need to climb into a Jeep or traverse a city by a tuk-tuk. Transport could include riding in a motor coach or stepping into a small van. The historic sites you visit have few handrails and to access the best views, there may be climbs of 80-100 steps.

Some participants have started a fitness regimen to help prepare for these adventures. For detailed activity level information, turn to pages 10 and 32 or visit www.roadscholar.org/presidentsjourney26.

- View the vibrant reds and oranges of the Sossusvlei sand dunes in Namibia on a sunrise excursion, a photographer's paradise!

▶ Bahia Palace
Marrakesh, Morocco

Marrakesh

Your first stop on the African continent is Morocco, where you'll explore the "Pearl of the South," Marrakesh. The city is home to many treasures, including the 19th-century Bahia Palace and the 12th-century esplanade of the Koutoubia Mosque, considered to be the most famous religious monument in Marrakesh.

One of these treasures is Le Jardin Secret, which is located inside the old city. An afternoon visit to this garden will showcase its extensive restoration and 16th-century roots. Take a moment to stop and smell the exotic plants from across the world and experience the site's more orderly side as an Islamic garden. Later in the afternoon, continue your feast for the senses at Jemaa el-Fna Square, where you'll find the largest traditional market in Morocco bustling with musicians, dancers and more!

HANDPICKED ACCOMMODATIONS

SAVOY Le Grand Hotel Marrakesh

This hotel is located in the heart of Marrakesh, five minutes from Jamaa el-Fna Square and the city center.

Namib-Naukluft National Park

One of the largest game parks in the world, Namib-Naukluft National Park runs along the western coast of Namibia and is your next stop on your learning adventure through Africa. An early morning will find you at the Sossusvlei Dunes, some of the highest freestanding sand dunes in the world. These dunes will serve as an illustration of the sand that contrasts with the white clay pan that forms the Namib Desert. Your Group Leader will tell you more about this ecosystem and the animals and plants that make their habitat in this desert.

You'll then travel to the Sesriem Canyon, formed through erosion by the Tsauchab River and a landmark of historical significance. A nature drive on the Park's lodge reserve will cap off a day filled with natural marvels.

Your next stop is South Africa's Table Mountain, a magnificent natural wonder rising over 3,500 feet above sea level. The mountain gets its name from its flat top, which stretches almost 10,000 feet wide and was created by natural development over millions of years.

You will be taking a cable car up to the summit of the mountain, providing fantastic views of the surrounding area and steep granite slopes. The cableway itself offers a fascinating history, dating back to 1929, with the mountain's relationship with Indigenous communities going back much further. You'll learn more about this human history and the jaw-dropping natural features of the area, which is both a national park and part of a UNESCO World Heritage Site.

Your drive to these points will follow the ocean on one of the most spectacular coastal roads in Africa. Once there, board the Flying Dutchman funicular, a mountainside railroad operating by cable, to reach a viewpoint walkway along the peak of Cape Point, the southwestern-most point of the African continent. Enjoy views of rocky mountains jutting out into the ocean's crashing waves while searching for whales, penguins and seals.

Speaking of penguins, an afternoon trip to Boulders Beach will offer a special opportunity to view the resident African penguin colony. Follow a local specialist along a sheltered beach to learn more about these vulnerable birds and observe them closely in a protected environment.

One of the last — but certainly not the least — sites along your journey through Africa is the Valley of the Kings. Led by local experts, explore the area that held royal burials dating back to 2100 BCE. The magnificent tombs of the Valley of the Kings are those of the pharaohs of the New Kingdom period (1550–1069 BCE), of which 63 dot the landscape. In addition to these tombs, the Colossi of Memnon stand at what was once the entrance to the Mortuary Temple of Amenhotep III, which was destroyed in an earthquake in 1200 BCE, leaving only the iconic statues. After experiencing thousands of years of history firsthand, a relaxing and educational voyage on the Nile caps off this unforgettable day and your epic journey throughout Africa.

Petra

A far cry from the lush green meadows of England, scenes of sandstone dominate every view as you journey through Jordan in search of the “lost city” of Petra. Though it's one of the most revered UNESCO World Heritage Sites, its popularity is a relatively new phenomenon. After first serving as the thriving capital of the Nabataean empire, the city sat in near ruin for centuries, lost to the Western world until the early 1800s. Cap off your journey in Petra by learning about the Bedouin, the nomadic Arab people who call this their home, through an interesting lecture by one of our esteemed experts.

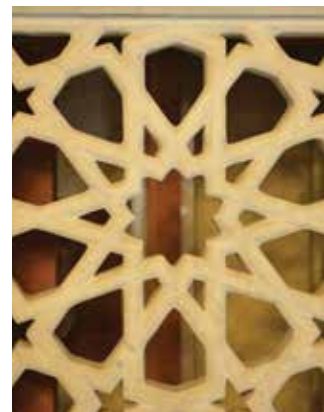

“On a scale of 1-10, this program is a 12. It far exceeded my expectations and I learned so much. Everything, from the plane to the food to the accommodations to the leaders, was first class. Definitely worth every dollar I spent.”
